What is DataQs?

DataQs is the online system for drivers, motor carriers, Federal and State agencies, and others to file concerns about Federal and State data maintained in Motor Carrier Management Information System (MCMIS) and released to the public by Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration (FMCSA).

The DataQs system is designed to provide affected commercial motor carriers, commercial drivers, and others an opportunity to seek and obtain correction of information maintained and disseminated by FMCSA.

DataQs, is provided via internet website, to accept Request for Data Review (RDR) and supporting documentation, acknowledge receipt of RDRs, notify FMCSA and State partners when RDRs are received, accept FMCSA and state postings or responses related to RDRs, provide automated notification capability, provide reporting capability based on pre-set parameters and tracks RDRs from submission through resolution. All transactions are conducted via the DataQs website.

How long do I have to dispute the data?

Review and possible correction of the data can be completed immediately after the safety event occurs. It can be entered for up to 36 months after the occurrence of the safety event.

Remember that documentation and evidence can be hard to retrieve after an extended period of time; requesting the review sooner than later is recommended.

Who respond to an RDR?

State field investigators and DataQs analysts review and respond to the majority of RDRs. Administrative-level users who are FMCSA employees and FMCSA Service Center and Division staff members may also respond to an RDR. We strive to provide a response within 10 business days.

Status options are build into the system and will inform the requestor about the process.

A requestor may dispute the same data twice; but always be sure to provide sufficient detail and evidence to support your request.
