

WisDOT Dispute Resolution Procedures - Informal Dispute Review Board (Third-Party Advisory Opinion)

1.0 GENERAL

1.1 Definitions

Definitions are as defined in WisDOT Dispute Resolution Procedures / Formal Dispute Review Board except as follows:

Agreement: The Informal Dispute Review Board Three-Party Agreement – Appendix A.

1.2 Informal Review Overview

An informal review may be provided by the Bureau and subsequently by a member of the Statewide Standing Dispute Review Board (DRB) roster.

If after attaining and considering the Bureau's recommendation concerning a pending or active dispute, the parties still do not agree on entitlement, either party may request an informal review by a member of the Statewide Standing DRB roster.

Use of such an informal review may expedite the settlement process and is certainly less costly and less time consuming than a formal DRB hearing. Where informal reviews have been used, their success in promoting resolution of the dispute has led to wide endorsement of this approach. When considering referral of an issue for informal review, the parties should thoroughly consider and discuss the issue with each other. The parties should recognize that if the issues are more complex than can be realistically dealt with by the informal nature of the informal review process, an informal review may be ineffective.

In making this determination, the disputing parties should take into consideration the complexity of the issues, whether experts may be necessary, and/or the length and complexity of the presentations. A DRB informal review does not require acceptance or rejection by the parties. The DRB's preliminary views on the issue form a basis for the parties to negotiate a settlement without further assistance from the DRB. Informal reviews are based only upon information available at the time, are subject to change based upon further data, and are not to be used or referred to in future hearings on the issue.

If the issue is not resolved after the informal review and a subsequent dispute hearing is held, no reference to the advisory opinion is allowed. All positions, evidence, and other relevant data are resubmitted at the hearing. If the dispute is later taken before a formal DRB, the DRB is not bound by the advisory opinion.

Advisory opinions are typically limited to entitlement issues and not quantum. The DRB may provide advice on the method to use in determining quantum without specifically determining quantum.

1.3 Availability

Per subsection 104.3.6 of the Standard Specifications, after the contractor has provided the department a 5-Day Written Statement and the department has responded with a 5-Day Written Response, an informal review may be utilized in the dispute resolution process when mutually agreed upon by both the contractor and department.

2.0 OPERATION

2.1 General

In general, the DRB will operate in accordance with these guidelines. However, it is not desirable to adopt hard-and-fast rules for the functioning of the informal review. The entire procedure shall be kept flexible to adapt to changing situations. The DRB may initiate, with the department's and contractor's concurrence, new procedures or modifications to existing procedures whenever this is deemed appropriate and beneficial in resolving the dispute.

2.2 Request Informal Opinion

When both disputing parties have decided that an advisory opinion would be beneficial in resolving an issue or dispute, the project manager shall contact the regional construction oversight engineer for concurrence. If the regional construction oversight engineer agrees that the issue warrants an advisory opinion, a DRB will be engaged by the Bureau of Project Development to hear the issues and render an opinion.

2.3 DRB Selection

The regional construction oversight engineer will select a single member DRB from the Statewide Standing DRB member roster. (See WisDOT Dispute Resolution Procedures / Formal Dispute Review Board, Section 2.0).

2.4 Agreement

The regional construction oversight engineer will execute the Agreement to engage a DRB selected from the statewide standing roster of DRB members.

2.5 Meeting Procedures

When a DRB has been retained, the DRB in conference with both parties and Bureau will set a date for presentations. The department shall provide to the DRB, a set of plans, specifications, and pertinent project correspondence. The department shall provide to the DRB and contractor, its 5-Day Written Response, and any other supporting documents pertinent to the dispute. Provide one copy to the DRB and 3 copies to the contractor.

The contractor shall provide to the DRB and department, its 5-Day Written Statement and supporting documents pertinent to the dispute. Provide one copy to the DRB and 3 copies to the department.

The disputing parties may further supplement the 5-Day Written Statements by each preparing a short summary of its position and submitting it to the DRB and the other disputing party prior to the meeting. Normally the disputing parties do not submit comprehensive position papers. Provide one copy to the DRB and 3 copies to the other disputing party.

All submittals shall be provided to the appropriate parties 7 calendar days prior to the meeting. At the meeting each party is given ample time to present its position, make rebuttals, provide key contract documents, and respond to the DRB's questions and requests.

The time required for these meetings varies widely, depending on the scope and complexity of the issue(s), but they are often short, thirty minutes to a couple hours or so.

2.6 Findings and Recommendations

The DRB may verbally render an opinion at the meeting or soon thereafter.

After the meeting, the DRB shall write the opinion, including the rationale, to ensure clarity. This shall be typed and is not usually a lengthy document. Copies are provided to the disputing parties and Bureau.

In some circumstances, after hearing the parties' presentations, the DRB may determine that the dispute is too complex to issue an advisory opinion. In such cases, they should immediately advise the parties and suggest engaging the claim process.

Occasionally the DRB, after deliberation, is unable to formulate an opinion and so advises the parties. Nonetheless, this opportunity for the parties to state their positions in a clear, uninterrupted fashion, and with subsequent questions from the neutral, is often a useful step in resolving disputes.

Advisory opinions are often sufficient to enable the parties to promptly resolve the dispute without a DRB hearing.

2.6 Clarification

After the advisory opinion is rendered, either party may ask for clarification. If the DRB determines clarification is appropriate and will help resolve the dispute, the DRB will provide clarification.

3.0 PAYMENT

The department shall bear the costs and expenses of the informal DRB. DRB members shall be compensated and reimbursed expenses as prescribed in the Agreement executed by the department, contractor, and DRB member.

The department will provide, at no cost to the contractor, administrative services such as coordination of the informal DRB and meeting facilities when state owned facilities are utilized. If other facilities and amenities are desired by both parties, these costs shall be equally shared by both parties.

The following payment procedures will be used:

1. The DRB member shall submit invoices to the regional construction oversight engineer for review.

2. After the regional engineer has reviewed and approved the invoices, the invoices will be forwarded to the project manager.
3. The project manager will review and then forward the DRB invoice(s) along with any non-state facility or amenity charges to the contractor.
4. The contractor shall pay the department approved invoices.
5. The contractor will then submit the invoices and documentation verifying payment to the project manager for payment.
6. The department will execute a change order to pay the entire DRB invoiced amount and 50 percent of non-state facility and/or amenity invoices.

There will be no markups applied to expenses connected with the DRB, either by the DRB members or by the contractor when requesting payment of the State's share of expenses.

Department's payment to contractor for accepted work will be made as follows:

Pay Item: Dispute Review Board

Pay Unit: Dollar

These procedures and the Agreement (Appendix A) contain all of the provisions for compensation and expenses of the DRB.

The agreed hourly rate shall include all incidental expenses including expenses for telephone, fax, postage, courier, printing, and computer services.
