1. This first Public Involvement Meeting (PIM) for the WIS 100 Corridor Study was advertised as one meeting held in two locations. Media sources included a press release, newspaper articles, a project website, e-mail, and a newsletter. The newsletter stated the goal of the meeting was to obtain input on WIS 100 corridor needs. Approximately 5,000 newsletters were mailed. The mailing list included property owners and businesses within an approximate one-quarter-mile distance on each side of the corridor between Layton Avenue and Silver Spring Drive. Members of the Project Advisory Committee for the north and south sections were also sent a newsletter. Members include local officials, major business, utility and other stakeholders, state and federal agencies, and American Indian tribes.
2. The meetings had an open-house format. Displays of project information showing corridor information and project purpose and need were available for review. Aerial maps with existing conditions were displayed. Attendees discussed concerns with project staff and had the opportunity to note their concerns directly on the maps at the specific location. Information for both the North and South corridor sections was available at each meeting location. A 6-page project handout and a comment sheet were provided to each attendee.
